

Duuuval Gazette

THEY ARE WHO WE THOUGHT THEY WERE !?!

Breakout Rookies- AFC East: Bills

By Chefscoopa

Picking back up our breakout rookie series, we move on to the AFC East. Starting with the Bills, they have a pretty stocked team and even used their 1st Rd pick to trade for an established WR in Stefon Diggs. So with their top draft pick left, they took A.J. Epenesa in the 2nd Rd and he is a sneaky good pick. They have him playing DE but, were he can really be a breakout rookie is if you move him to DT. With 74(SPD), 81(ACC), and 84(STR), he is a beast if he is playing 3T-DT in this bills defense. They already have Ed Oliver and Jerry Hughes that offenses have to worry about. This is the perfect spot to have him breakout.

Continued on page #9

Breakout Rookies- AFC East: Patriots

By Chefscoopa

Looking over the Pats, they are definitely built back to front with their defense and that mind-set stays par for course with their best possible breakout rookie SS- K.Dugger. Coming from the FCS level and getting drafted in the 2nd Rd means that you are a stud and this dude definitely is. Coming in at 6'2" 220lbs and having 89(SPD), 88(ACC), 92(JMP), and 84(COD), he is perfect for battling the hybrid/move TEs in the game today. He has the speed to run with the fastest of TEs but, also the height and weight to not get boxed out majority of the time against the biggest TEs. This makes him a diamond in the rough and a perfect breakout rookie.

Continued on page #9

Boy Oh, Boy!...Was this game a shoot-out of epic proportions. The 2nd quarter specifically was like blazing saddles with each team scoring around 2+ TDs. The Jags Defense turned up and got some INTs in the 3rd to give the offense the ball back and, then that's when things begun to turn. The team just didn't know it yet.

The Jags used the turnovers in the 3rd to pull away and the team was beginning to drink their own koolaid and feel they had won already. Only to see all of that smashed and taken away in the 4th quarter. The 4th quarter the Jags did not score at all. Not only did they not score at all in the 4th quarter, they also gave up 19 unanswered to see the lions score with 51 seconds left on the clock.

Continued on page #0

This was all setup after a bad coaching decision to go for it on 4th down in the Jags own territory, on a fake punt run that ended with TJ Logan stepping out of bounds while trying to turn the corner on a lions defender.

Also let's not forget about the running game. The Jags did run the ball 19 times but, did not reach over 100yds running in the game. T.J. Logan got majority of the carries with 15 on the day. The Jags limp into the bye week (2-4) but, are confident in the things the secondary showed in this game and the hope it gives the team for the future despite M.Stafford throwing for over 500yds.

By Jags Insider

Breakout Rookies- AFC East: Dolphins

By Chefscoopa

Looking at the Dolphins, we will skip over "Tua" because we all know what he is and that he will be a focus. The player I feel could be a breakout player for the Dolphins is actually on the defense. That player would be CB- N.Igbinoghene. He is only 5'11" but, with 91(SPD), 92(ACC), and 93(JMP) I feel like he could develop into a standout No.2 CB opposite B.Jones and what better way than to have a breakout rookie season!

Continued on page #4

Breakout Rookies- AFC East: Jets

By Chefscoopa

Wrapping up the AFC East we finish with the Jets. With this team they are pretty bare across the board so they had plenty of new rookies to choose from. The player on their offense that is positioned for a breakout rookie season is none other than WR- Denzel Mims. Standing at 6'3" and moving around with 92(SPD), 91(ACC), 92(AGI), and 93(JMP) makes him a great rookie to plug in at No.1 for this offense and in prime position for a breakout yr.

On defense, the teams' 3rd Rd pick is going to be a stud in this defense. I'm talking about FS- Ashtyn Davis. Standing in at 6'1" 200lbs, he is primed to be a shoo-in for a breakout rookie season as this team is bare folks will take many shots and this dude is ready to run deep in a single high defense. Coming in with 92(SPD), 89(JMP), and 80+(HPW), he is definitely go be a threat!

Continued on page #4